

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A default printer and a paper type are set for each combination of a print service and a paper size in a tabular form. The setting field has a printer setting box 67 on the upper row to set a default printer used for execution of a print job and a paper type setting box 68 on the lower row to set a selected type of printing paper. A pulldown menu is open in the printer setting box 67 to allow the user to select a desired printer among printers connecting with a local network and printers connecting with another network different from the local network. In response to an execution instruction of a selected print job, in which a printer connecting with the different network is set to the default printer, the selected print job is sent to an apparatus, in which a driver of the default printer is installed. The apparatus executes the selected print job.